

Name:

The Great Gatsby Chapter VII

The parties at _____ have stopped. The servants have changed. Gatsby phones _____ and during the course of their conversation tells him that _____ comes over often during the afternoons. Gatsby finally gets around to the reason for the phone call, which is: _____ wants Nick to come to lunch at her house tomorrow. The group at the Buchanan's is _____, _____, _____, _____, and _____. When Gatsby and Nick arrive, Tom is on the phone with _____ talking about the sale of his vehicle. Tom comes in the room and greets the visitors and Daisy sends him for a drink. While he is gone she gets up and _____ Gatsby. Tom comes back as his daughter is leaving and serves drinks. He then invites Gatsby outside to have a look at the place. The temperature is really _____. _____ votes to go to town. And the others reluctantly get ready to go. Although she is the one who proposed the idea, _____ appears reluctant to go. They organize the cars, _____, _____, and _____ go in Gatsby's car while _____ drives Tom's car and _____ rides with him. Tom knows there is something going on between Daisy and Gatsby and it angers him. They stop at _____ and fill up on gas. _____ looks sick and tells them that he needs money because he is moving out west whether his wife wants to or not. He realizes that his wife is having an _____ but he doesn't know who with yet. Myrtle, watching from an upper window, makes a mistaken assumption that _____ is Tom's wife. The group ends up in a suite in the _____ and began to drink. The conversation swings to _____ and _____'s wedding and some of the odd people who attended the affair. Tom begins an attack on _____ trying to discredit him in front of the others. Daisy interrupts. But before _____ can change the topic, Tom throws the affair out in the open by asking Gatsby what kind of a row he is trying to cause in Tom's house. Gatsby finally attempts to talk and Daisy interrupts. Tom and Gatsby ignore her and continue their argument on who Daisy truly _____. Daisy at first agrees with _____. Telling _____ that she never loved him and she had always loved _____. Then she breaks down and admits to loving them both. And Gatsby tells Tom that it's no matter, Daisy is leaving _____. Tom confronts Gatsby about his bootlegging and Gatsby defends himself in front of Daisy. It has gone too far, Daisy is beyond courage and is unable to consider leaving _____. Nick realizes today is his _____. Gatsby and Daisy leave in _____'s car and Nick, Jordan, and Tom leave a little later in _____'s car. On the way home Tom, Nick, and Jordan are stopped at _____'s garage because _____ had been hit by a car coming from _____ and is killed. The driver of the car that had been headed to _____ had stopped and told the police officer what color the car was: _____. _____ perked up when he heard the color, he knew and recognized that car. _____ quickly grabs him and tells him that the car he was in that afternoon was not his. It was a borrowed car. Tom, Nick, and Jordan leave. They reach home and Nick leaves the group to return home. He sees Gatsby hiding in the _____ watching the house on request from Daisy. Gatsby attempts to tell him Nick realizes the truth. _____ hadn't been driving the car, but will lie to protect _____. Nick goes up to the house to see how Tom and Daisy are doing. He sees them eating _____. He returns to Gatsby and tells him that things are all clear up at the house, yet Gatsby decides to stay and keep an eye out. _____ returns home.